REMARKS

Claims 1-3 were objected for informalities which have been corrected.

Claims 1 was rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hsu in view of Drew, II et al., and Keller et al.

Claims 2 was rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hsu in view of Drew, II et al., and Motev et al.

Claims 3 was rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hsu in view of Drew, II et al., and Sullivan et al.

Hsu discloses a decorative plate (15) with a name or pattern (151) present on the decorative plate before the decorative plate (15) is placed within the recess (13) of the striking face (12) of the putter head (1). Then, an epoxy is poured into the recess (13) around the decorative plate to create an insert block (16). Thus, Hsu teaches to print an indicia on a plate before the plate becomes part of the golf club head.

Drew, II et al. does not teach a base with a club containment recess.

Claims 1-3 have been amended to better define the invention of the present Application. Claims 1-3 have been limited to a club containment recess within the base, support for which is found at paragraph 48 of the Specification and figure 12. Claims 1-3 have also been amended to better define the indicia being printed directly on a polymer insert of a golf club head.

The prior art fails to disclose the invention of the amended claims. Hsu teaches printing indicia on a plate before the plate is a component of the golf club head. Drew II, et al., fails to disclose the club containment recess of the base.
